NEW AND BETTER WAYS OF DOING THINGS

Shepard's Citations was a good service when it was first introduced over a century ago. It is a far superior service today.

Every new idea that promises improvement is studied and thoroughly tested both in our Editorial and Mechanical Divisions. When we are sure of its value, it is incorporated in the citation issues.

The result is a service that is always new. No matter when you acquire Shepard's Citations for your library, you will find that it is geared to your own citation requirements. And you will be amazed at the simplicity with which it makes available such a wealth of important references to your cases and statutes.

The constant search for new and better ways of doing things has helped to make Shepard's Citations "indispensable" in modern legal practice. Once you have acquired the habit of using the service in your own office, we are sure you will agree that nothing else can take its place.
